The Daily Mail has created a great deal of publicity around the notorious mug shot from three years ago of an accused rapist/murderer, but the simple fact is that the photo was taken as a routine security precaution, and had absolutely nothing to do with the case. The security camera at the St. Louis County jail captured the image in an effort to make sure that someone didn't try to take some kind of “final statement” from a prisoner before release. The man in the photo, 45-year-old Joseph Peterson, never posed any threat to anyone. He was arrested on October 24, 2011, and he faces charges of first-degree murder, first-degree assault, armed criminal action and three counts of tampering with evidence. The photo was snapped only two days after Peterson, who was in jail for violating his probation and failing to register as a sex offender, allegedly set his ex-girlfriend's 10-year-old daughter on fire in the apartment they shared. The girl died of her injuries three days later.

The program invited all sixth graders to spend their summer in LA, working with researchers on projects that focused on six “explosive” topics — civil rights, the environment, engineering, food, technology, and the brain. The library's Youth Services librarians — who are always looking to connect students with books — were able to pair up the 12th graders with a research team from UC Davis, and 20 other sixth-graders to UC Berkeley. The goal of CSLEP is to help students become lifelong learners, so they can be prepared for the rigors of high school and beyond. It's also meant to give the students a taste of how researchers work with students.We wanted to let you know, in case you missed it, about this awesome program.
