Genomic instability is a hallmark of cancer that results from abnormal regulation of genome maintenance pathways. The emerging view is that HERC2 is a key regulator of genomic stability that helps safeguard the genome by protecting key oncogenes from genome-destabilizing genomic events, such as DNA breaks. In Drosophila, loss of HERC2 results in DNA break-induced mutagenesis, and genetic analysis of a human cell line deficient for HERC2 suggests that this gene may function in a similar manner to safeguard human genomes from the genome instability caused by chromosomal breaks in cancer cells. Details on the recently revealed H.P. Lovecraft Historical Prize Anthology, a series of four short stories each of which would be inspired by one of Lovecraft's tales, were revealed last week. The first anthology, The Lurking Fear (based on "The Shadow Out of Time"), will be out on June 18, 2019. Today, the second anthology, The Dreams in the Witch House (based on "The Colour Out of Space"), is available for pre-order. The Dreams in the Witch House will be available on Amazon as of December 16, 2018, with
