I've been having this problem where I submit a new app to the market place and the Google Play website says it has been approved, but I get an email saying that it hasn't been accepted yet (of course I have no actual version/build available). Now I'm worried. I'm wondering if this is a normal and expected behaviour? Has anyone experienced this before? A: It sounds like your app is working fine and you just haven't received any emails about it yet. It's still subject to the regular reviews, the OP you mentioned also probably saw this. You can contact the user who answered that question to verify the link is working. You should probably also ask that user if they've got any other questions they might have.
