I am proud to announce the release of a completely new version of "LWO2D". As in the last version, I have made big changes to make this new version better than before. It has a more powerful and efficient renderer. It is possible to achieve realistic textures, realistic lighting,...... with a simple shader code. This new version also has a renderer for LWO2D and UVW2D. My goal is to create an SDK (software development kit) for LWO2D. So that, once the SDK is complete, other users can easily use this SDK in their engines. For more information, click on the ReadMe.txt attached to the download. This release has been tested on Windows and Linux with OpenGL (OpenGL 3.3 and 4). For Windows, you need OpenGL and Mesa 3D to be installed. For Linux, you need at least glibc 2.6. Just a month after the release of my last version of "LWO2D" I started working on a new version of "LWO2D". In this new version I have introduced some fundamental changes. In this post I will introduce some of these changes. - The preview function is a lot more powerful than before. With the 3d preview function, it is possible to preview the preview effect directly on your computer. You can look at the preview and have the rendering directly in your system. It has become very easy to use. I have also replaced the User interface with a more user friendly user interface. - The renderer in this version of LWO2D has improved a lot. It's able to render a lot more realistic materials than before. Materials are very important when you want to achieve a good realistic effect. With the use of a shader, this rendering can be achieved easily. For more information, check the readme.txt of this version. So, just go to and download it and try it out for yourself. In my last post I explained why 3D modelling in Blender is difficult, and how I had done a fix
