As shown in Patent Document 1 (JP 2015-161572 A), this kind of looping sewing device has a structure such that an end of a fabric bobbin is supported and held by a fabric holding belt serving as a looping fabric conveyor that is entrained around a drive pulley, and two needle bars having a row of needles each, and four suction nozzles disposed on both sides of the fabric holding belt are provided to each side of the two needle bars. With this structure, by moving the fabric holding belt and the needles in a plane horizontal to the bobbin, loops of fabric are formed on the bobbin by the needle bars being passed through the fabric held by the fabric holding belt and the loops of fabric are sucked to the four suction nozzles.
