Planning for your Graphics Today, the most popular style is realism. Photographers and designers spend a lot of time researching and attending lectures in Photoshop and other programs to learn how to accurately simulate the world of nature and human life. It is a reality. Digital art and photographs are appealing because they capture moments in time that quickly fade from memory, which is something that traditional media can't deliver. However, learning to manipulate such media requires many hours of practice and dedication. I started my photographic career as a naive college student when Photoshop was just beginning to flourish. I knew nothing about the intricacies of photography and photography software. I quickly learned how to take shots and how to edit them, with the help of my father, who was a professional photographer in the old days when film was still used. Photography is a widely popular art form and craft. One of the most popular industries today is the design field. Whether you have a design or branding business or are an aspiring graphic artist, learning basic Photoshop concepts is important. In this chapter, I'll cover the basics of designing in Photoshop. This book serves as a basic reference for readers who have Photoshop experience and wish to learn more. For those who are new to Photoshop and can't quite figure out how to do certain things, I provide detailed tutorials with

If you are using Photoshop CC, you can save your image in Photoshop Elements format (PSD) and import it in Photoshop CC. Step 1: Choose an image and add a text This is a tutorial to make memes. For this tutorial, you'll need an image of your choice. Click on the Picture icon, select your image and drag it to a new layer in the Layers panel. If you want to delete your previous image, make sure you have a new layer in the layers panel and click on the layer and then hit Delete. This is an image of my face, created by Gwenwithdata. Drag the new layer into your desired Photoshop document to create a new layer. Highlight your new layer and click on the text icon on your artboard to add some text. Add the text as shown in the figure below. Change the text color and add some effects to make it more special. Don't forget to delete the first layer from the canvas to be sure there are no text on it. You may also want to apply some modifications to your image like cropping or converting it to black & white. But in this tutorial, we will only be using the text to make the images. Step 2: Make your text look different Change the text as seen in the figure below Make the text stand out more by adding a higher opacity to the text. This will make it a little less detailed (to preserve space). Step 3: Add new text If you have added the different fonts to your text layer as shown in the figure below Click on the type tool, select the font you want to use and click again to add the new text. Q: Best way to store data in C and Python I'm working on a project that will be done on both C and Python. For consistency, they should do the exact same thing. I have some data I need to store, and I was wondering what's the best way to do this. I want it to be fast, elegant and simple. The original data would be float's representing the voltage in volts. However, I was thinking to store the data in a string then convert it to float after I'm done. I don't really want to use `string_format` because I want it to be constant. What's the best way to store the data in the fastest and simplest way? A: The simplest thing is to just have the Python side export the float data with your usual formatting, and the C side use it as a float.

1. Field of the Invention This invention relates generally to self propelled vehicles and more specifically to a self propelled vehicle having a plurality of wheels and a steering mechanism, the steering mechanism being controlled by a steering motor.

2. Description of the Related Art U.S. Pat. No. 4,757,520, assigned to the assignee hereof, and U.S. Pat. Nos. 5,158,312, 5,265,717 and 5,649,366 also assigned to the assignee hereof, all disclose self propelled vehicles which do not employ a steering motor. When a command is received, a steering motor will rotate a main wheel in either a clockwise or counterclockwise direction to produce a turn of the vehicle. These patents and pending applications are all incorporated herein by reference. In the above-noted patents and pending applications, a steering motor does not actually steer the vehicle. Rather, in the preferred embodiments of these patents and pending applications, a main wheel is rotated by the steering motor and this rotation will produce a turning of the vehicle. It is also known to drive a vehicle with a steering motor such that the rotational axis of the main wheel is offset from the rotational axis of the steering motor. A self propelled vehicle of the type having a steering motor to steer the vehicle is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,944,858, also assigned to the assignee hereof. This patent discloses a steering mechanism which includes a steering motor and a main wheel. The steering motor controls the speed with which the

The present invention relates to an apparatus and method for image-preserving cleaning of natural teeth and discolored teeth. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method and apparatus for improving the appearance of stained and discolored teeth through a series of chemical and mechanical procedures. It is well known that teeth have a natural yellow appearance due to the presence of a combination of pigment in the teeth, which is natural to the teeth but which varies with age, nutrition, tooth brushing and the like. In general, the natural yellow color of the teeth represents the ultimate color, which is visible when the entire oral cavity is viewed. Teeth of a given color can be "tinted" using metallic oxides which deposit on the enamel surface of teeth or lightening and/or brightening agents, which are commonly referred to as "whitening" agents. Until recently, the market for whitening and lightening agents has been limited, and only a few types of such agents have been available to consumers. More recently, a number of new whitening or lightening agents have become available. The agents which have been available are typically applied by the consumer on a regular basis to be able to make use of them. Unfortunately, such use is difficult. Application of the agents is difficult and time consuming, particularly when teeth are visited on a regular basis. Furthermore, such agents are removed or tend to be removed by normal routines, including normal brushing of the teeth. The limited number of available agents, combined with their inability to withstand normal brushing, makes their use difficult. Most consumers do not want to go without tooth brushing. They simply do not realize that it is very important to maintain a clean oral cavity. This occurs even though they often insist that they floss and brush their teeth on a regular basis. As a consequence, the toothbrush is not very effective in removing some of the staining agents such as oxides, from tooth enamel. Another problem with present agents is that they do not selectively remove the particular stains on tooth enamel which cause the teeth to assume the yellow coloring. Rather, they operate to remove the stains from the entire enamel surface. In order to remove the stains selectively, a greater amount of the agent must be used. Unfortunately, in the past, the amount of agent which could be applied was limited, because the agents would not stand up to the rigors of oral hygiene procedures. As a consequence, despite the tendency to complain about the cost of obtaining a new
