Q: Redirect from `www.site.com/folder/` to `www.site.com` I am having this redirect set up in my `.htaccess` file to redirect `www.site.com/folder/` to `www.site.com` # Redirect root folder to `www.site.com` RewriteEngine On RewriteCond `%{HTTP_HOST} ^www\.site\.com` RewriteRule `(.) [R=301,L]` But it is throwing a redirect loop error. How can I fix this redirect loop issue? A: The problem is that the pattern you're matching is capturing the `www.site.com` part and redirecting the request back onto itself as a permanent redirect. You need to make the `%{HTTP_HOST}` conditional so that only requests for the `www.site.com` path are matched. # Only redirect a request for the `www.site.com` # domain name, NOT any other path, not request parameters RewriteCond `%{HTTP_HOST} ^www\.(.+)$` RewriteRule `(.) [R=301,L]` # The non-www to www redirect happens last. # The purpose of this rule is to redirect the www version of a subdomain to the non-www version of the domain. RewriteCond `%{HTTP_HOST} !^www\.` RewriteCond `%{HTTP_HOST} ^(.+)$` RewriteRule `^(.*)$ [R=301,L,QSA]` function (err, output) { expect(err).not.to.exist() expect(output).to.eql(expect.stringContaining('Docker.setup')) expect(output).to.eql(expect.stringContaining('WARNING: Azure is not supported in this version')) done() } it('should fail due to Azure is not supported in this version', function (done) {

When I hit the url, I get the expected response, however, when I hit the url again, it returns the same response. I expect the new images to be displayed. How can I do this? `import requests from flask import Flask, jsonify, request, make_response, request @app.route('/get_images') def get_images(): if request.method == 'POST': temp = requests.get('') return jsonify(temp.json()), 200, {'Content-Type': 'application/json'}` @app.route('/images/gallery') def images_gallery(): return requests.get('').json() A: I have found the answer after some testing and found out that this is because of I guess, I didn't understand how ajax works. Once I sent the request, it was just showing what was there already. OK, I want to note this first for the record: The major points of the OAuth 2.0 specification are now past the Draft stage and the IETF is expected to be publishing its final, official version before the end of the year. Implementation libraries have been written. Communication has been done to the spec's defining organization (the OASIS OAuth working group) and there have been an increasing number of implementations in use Let's briefly outline what OAuth is OAuth is an authorization framework for the web. The basic idea of OAuth is that you can authorize users of your app to access a resource on another website. For example, lets say that you want to be able to allow users of your social networking app to sign into their social networking accounts. You can do this by letting them log into your app and sending them a code, which is then sent back to the user's social networking account. Each time you want the user to do something on their social networking account, you ask them
