RelatedQ: Accessing parent object from nested children properties I'm trying to access the csv file of a WriterInfo object. I am using the following method: ScriptProperties.PropertyNames = {"Author", "Name", "Title"} ScriptProperties.PropertyNames is a public static readonly property that contains the property name of the CSV file. Then I use: MainWriterInfo.ScriptProperties to access the properties of the MainWriterInfo object. I finally want to access the CSV file of the MainWriterInfo object and then read its properties. So, in order to read the properties of the CSV file I'm using: int Index = ScriptProperties.PropertyNames.IndexOf(Content.filename); IEnumerable.IndexOf(String) returns the index of the next string to be searched in the collection of strings, if the current string is not found the return is -1. Now I want to write a method that returns the content of the CSV file. public string writeTextProperty(String pName) { string sResult = String.Empty; int Index = ScriptProperties.PropertyNames.IndexOf(Content.filename); while (Index != -1) { sResult += ScriptProperties.PropertyNames[Index] + "=" + Content[Index].ToString(); Index = ScriptProperties.PropertyNames.IndexOf(Content.filename); } return sResult; } I don't know the value of the pName parameter. Maybe if I change the parameter then I could think to write a method for each property that I want to write into the CSV file. But maybe is there any simpler way? To sum up: To access to the properties of the Main
